"TECHNICAL ANALYSIS FOR EVERYONE"

MICHAEL KAHN RESEARCH LLC

January 26, 2015 – There are three huge stories affecting modern civilization as we know it. The Greek election, the Epic Blizzard about to hit New York and the air pressure of Patriot footballs. Obviously, our language is intentionally colorful but only one of the above is really important. There will be more snow in New England and who is not already sick of "deflategate." But ratings is ratings (sic).

The Greek's elected a far left regime and now withdrawal from the euro is on the table. And if that progresses, then everyone turns towards a similar event from Spain. The PIIGS drama is back. The euro hit a new low.

Back here, the tanking euro is making it hard for gold to rally. The metal did move higher right after the Greek election but backed down thanks to the currency effect. Keep in mind that both the dollar and gold are rising for weeks and that is unusual to say the least.

Stocks in Europe are still moving up, likely riding the liquidity wave of last week's QE announcement. One thing to note, while US stocks sold off Friday afternoon after Europe closed, the latter opened lower to play "catch down" and then rallied back. We'd say that all told Europe is still a happy place for investors.

Oil dipped to a new low overnight although ETFs came back to green in the premarket. This has got to be deflating, so to speak, for oil bulls and can send sentiment even lower. We like that and still see energy as the sleeper market for 2015. We just have to wait for the technicals to tell us when it is time to buy.

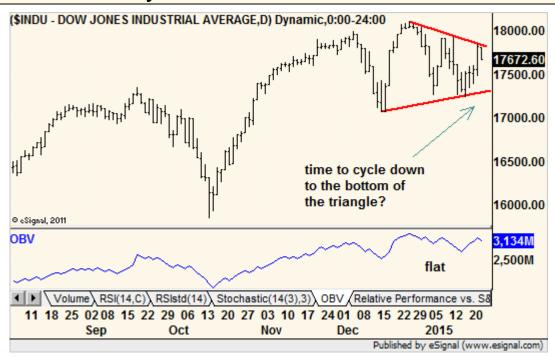

Finally, copper is also is sort of a freefall – or was until late this morning (still in the premarket). We've got a futures chart below to show a potential bottom. No buying yet!

On the hourly chart, the SPY formed a mini-RSI divergence at Friday's early high, which is now a rather big intraday resistance level. Trace it back across the chart to the start of the year. We also see a trendline breakdown, again in this intraday time frame.

Finally, from Twitter on Friday, the Nasdaq scored more new lows than highs for the sixth straight day. The seasonal (late January rally) appears to be over. The daily charts below put that into context.

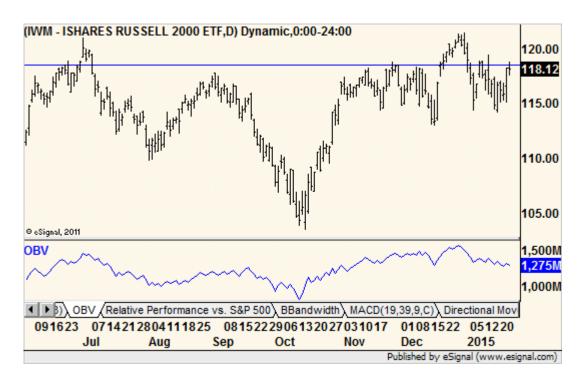

Index Charts of the Day

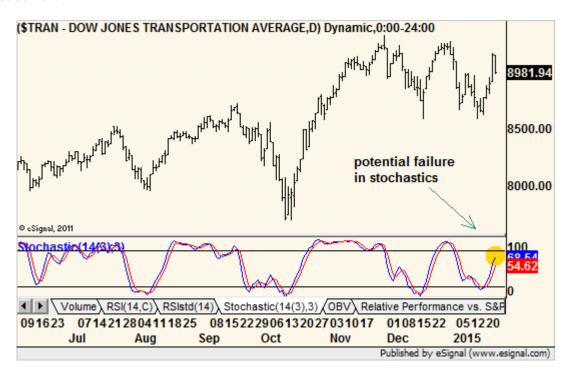

The Dow shows the coiling action since early December and the rally off last week's low ran into resistance. Flat on-balance volume tells us the market is sideways, not trending.

The Nasdaq may have eked out a gain and tech stocks may have led the Asian rebound overnight but this looks to be a pending failure within the trading range. Volume "sort of" looks like it fell during last week's rally but it is not really definitive enough to believe. If anything, it certainly did not expand during the rally so that is more reason to call this a flat market.

The small cap Russell 2000 ETF has a slight decrease in on-balance volume during last week's chop. That is at least "not bullish."

Transports soared Thursday thanks to airlines and gave a lot back Friday thanks to UPS. If they continue lower from here we will get a failure in both price to reach resistance within a range and stochastics to reach high levels. Basically that is short-term bearish.

The Radar Screen

This is a list of potential opportunities, not a recommended portfolio. Underlined text is a change from previous report and if important it will be highlighted in yellow. If and when stocks give buy or sell signals here, they then move into the Advice Tracker section below. Dates listed are first appearances in the Radar Screen or the last major update. We do not take "buy/sell on close" triggers or "at the open" triggers if the stock moves more than 4-5%. See http://quicktakespro.com/radar.html for all Radar Screen rules and terms.

Market Highlights

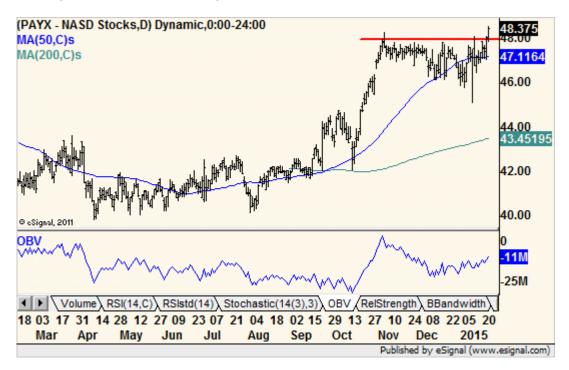

Copper – There is a whole lot of trading left today but the chart here shows a bounce off this month's panicky low and a possible hammer candle (not shown). Copper is getting a lot of negative press right now so this could, repeat could, be some sort of temporary low. Our long in FCX is bid slightly higher this morning.

Post – Cereal maker buying a rival and the stock is up big in the premarket. A close above Friday's high 42.36 would actually be a technical breakout. If it eases lower from its presumed opening high it might be a tasty treat (sorry but we had to).

Alibaba – Pausing at the trendline. Watching.

Paychex – Broke out Friday but easing today. Another one to watch.

Advice Tracker

This is a list of stocks that have triggered buys or sells and not a recommended portfolio. We will track them with suggested strategies but specific stops and position closes are up to the subscriber. Symbols in red mean that the position was stopped out. Stops in red were changed. Any position that moves in the desired direction and then reverses by 5% from the extreme that day is an automatic stop out. This is to compensate for the inability of this once per day newsletter to alert subscribers to the reversal.

Notes: Stopped out of the GDXJ long but we pocket a nice short-term gain. Looking to get back in soon.

Also raised the stop in HAL.
