"TECHNICAL ANALYSIS FOR EVERYONE"

MICHAEL KAHN RESEARCH LLC

August 12, 2015 – The market giveth and the market taketh away. Tuesday erased Monday's big gain leaving confusion in its path. The only thing we know now is that the Dow did indeed have its moving average death cross and hidden from view so did the NYSE Composite. All major averages are below 50-day averages and the Russell 2000 is also below its 200-day.

We can keep going. Energy, tech, basic materials and industrials SPDR ETFs are below 200-day averages. And biotech is now below its major trendline.

So was all of this sparked by China's currency foibles? No. This is all as of yesterday's close – well before we got the overnight news that China has to support its tumbling currency.

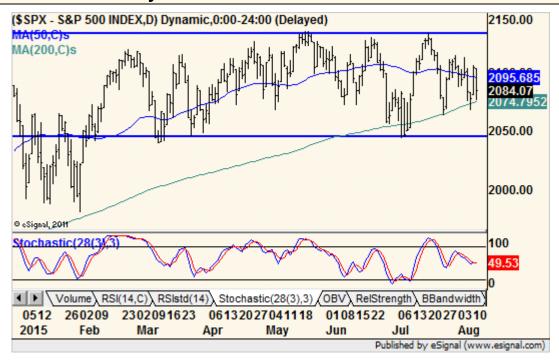

China's stock market was down only modestly but Europe took it on the chin with 2% losses fairly common. And as long as we are talking about death crosses, they are in place in Russia, Australia, Singapore, Thailand, Malaysia and Philippines. Brazil is a day or two away.

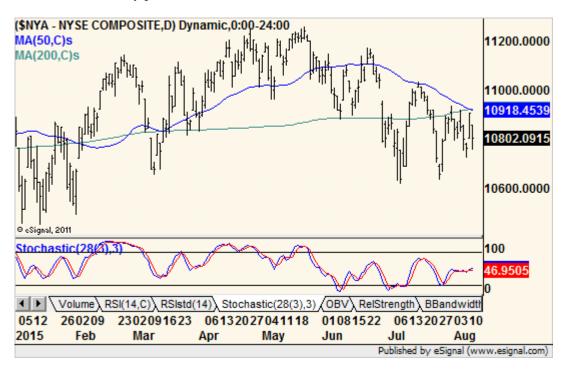

OK, now the hourly chart has problems. We always expect trap door opens when the overnight news is this bad so selling the open may be too risky but it is now clear what the short-term trend is right now. Down. Still, support at the lower horizontal line is far from in danger.

Cash with some shorts. The market is indeed topping but it has not yet really broken.

Index Charts of the Day

The S&P 500 is still between its flat average and in an overall range. However, we think the bias is down. Stochastics above uses a 28-day period (instead of 14).

Here is the NYSE composite with its death cross. Unfortunately for the bears, these crosses have happened too many times to be useful. On the other hand, the exponential version did not whipsaw earlier this year and has not yet crossed over to the downside. We'll look at that one next time.

The Radar Screen

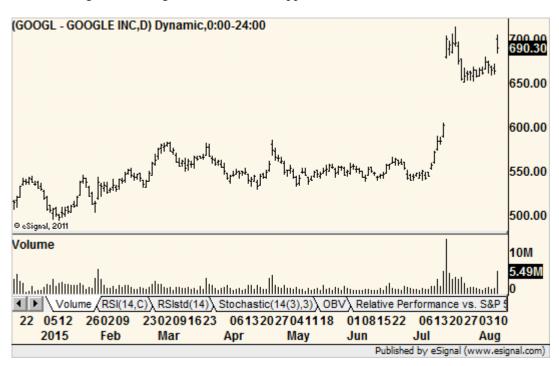

This is a list of potential opportunities, not a recommended portfolio. Underlined text is a change from previous report and if important it will be highlighted in yellow. If and when stocks give buy or sell signals here, they then move into the Advice Tracker section below. Dates listed are first appearances in the Radar Screen or the last major update. We do not take "buy/sell on close" triggers or "at the open" triggers if the stock moves more than 4-5%. See http://quicktakespro.com/radar.html for all Radar Screen rules and terms.

Market Highlights

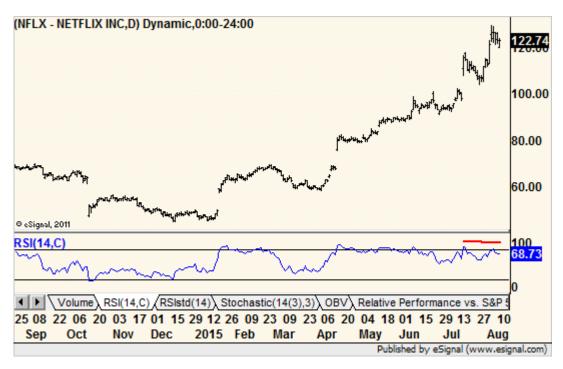

U.S. Dollar index – Big hit. Heading towards the next support.

Google – Bug jump after its Alphabet news. This general is back on track but we think the whole market is at risk.

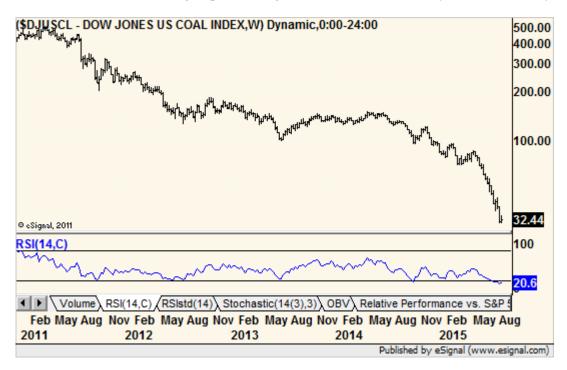

Apple – Measured target near 110 but real support is a few dollars below that.

Netflix – The real leader has a very slight momentum divergence. Not a problem at this time but we are watching this not to trade but to know when the market has given up.

Industrial Metals and Mining – This group is heading to its 2008 lows and is very much affected by China.

Coal – This is a log scaled chart and it shows the acceleration into bankruptcy. Of course, we cannot predict that will happen but the market sure thinks so. We still think that a portfolio of solvent coal stocks will do well over time but it is still too early to buy. We need some kind of sign that the death spiral is nearing its end and China's decline is not helping.

Advice Tracker

This is a list of stocks that have triggered buys or sells and not a recommended portfolio. We will track them with suggested strategies but specific stops and position closes are up to the subscriber. Symbols in red mean that the position was stopped out. Symbols in green were closed by us. Stops in red were changed. Any position that moves in the desired direction and then reverses by 5% from the extreme that day is an automatic stop out. This is to compensate for the inability of this once per day newsletter to alert subscribers to the reversal.
