"TECHNICAL ANALYSIS FOR EVERYONE"

May 8, 2014 - What a split market! While the Dow rocketed higher, small stocks tanked in the morning. The Russell 2000, however, managed to climb back to the flat line and that left a hammer candle on the charts once again. The last time that happened was in February before a rather hefty run up to new highs. Will it happen again? Of course, we cannot know but unlike last time, yesterday's trading took place completely below the 200-day average. Still, if the index confirms the reversal then we'll have to eat some crow. But not much of that angry bird as the trends still down.

Don't forget, back in February banks, tech and housing were outperforming the market. They are not now. And many (not all) of the super momentum leaders such as TSLA, FB and UA were still leading. They are not now. Just ask YELP what's going on now and that is what you might do (yelp).

Gold took a hit yesterday after Janet Yellen's comments on the economy. She was rather upbeat. We think she is delusional but we'll follow the chart instead of passing judgment. That chart still keeps us on the sidelines until we get a better buying opportunity.

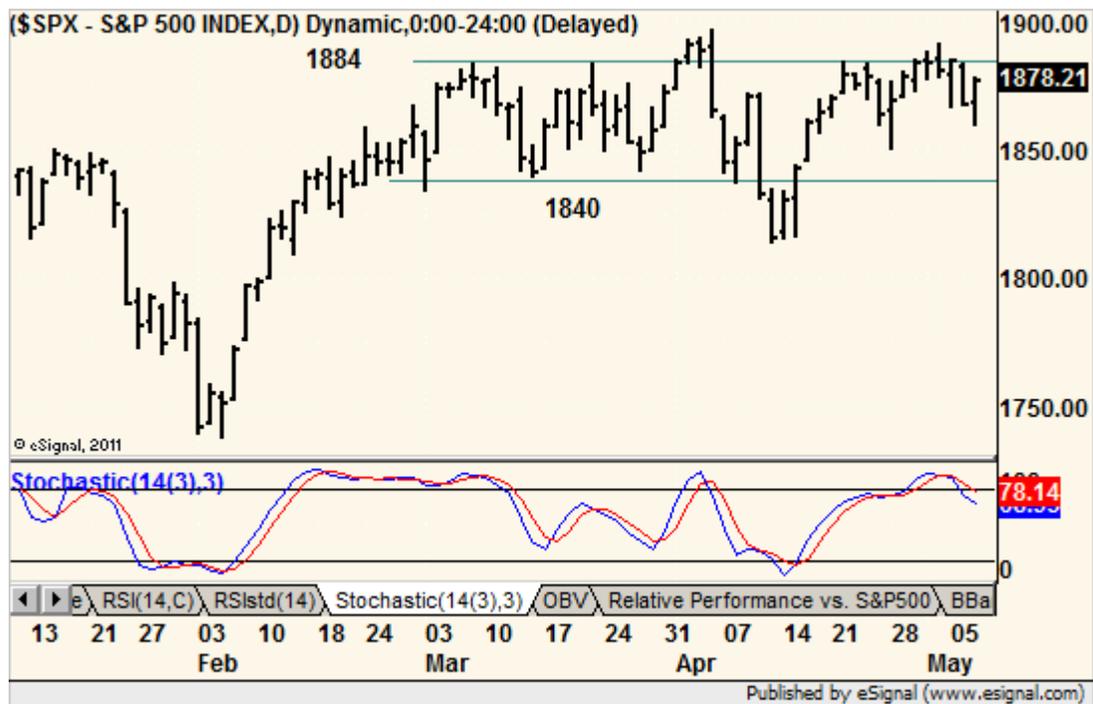

The hourly chart remains in its range although in the morning it looked as if it was breaking down. Note stochastics is already back in overbought territory and that suggests there will be no breakout today. No guarantees on that one, however. The waiting continues.

That's about it. This earnings season continues to produce punishment for transgressors such as TSLA even as it still rewards to righteous such as GMCR. More bifurcation, in our view. When winners are not rewarded then we'll know the bear is here. Conversely, if losers are not destroyed then we'll know the bull is making a comeback.

Until then, we have a split market and that conjures thoughts of hydrogen filled dirigibles over New Jersey (no, not the governor).

Index Charts of the Day

Intraday reversal but still a downside stochastics cross. We still see the range in effect.

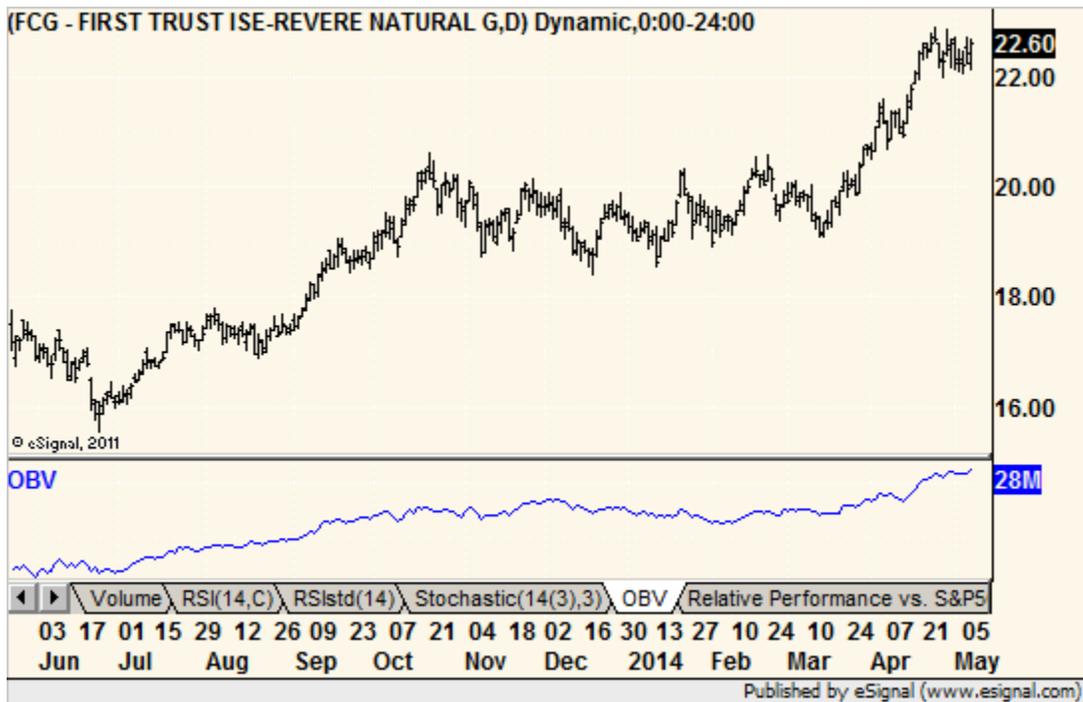

The Russell is still below the 200-day but scored a hammer candle. It did the same in February but that was then, this is now. Conditions are very different but even so we'll have to watch for upside follow through today.

The Radar Screen

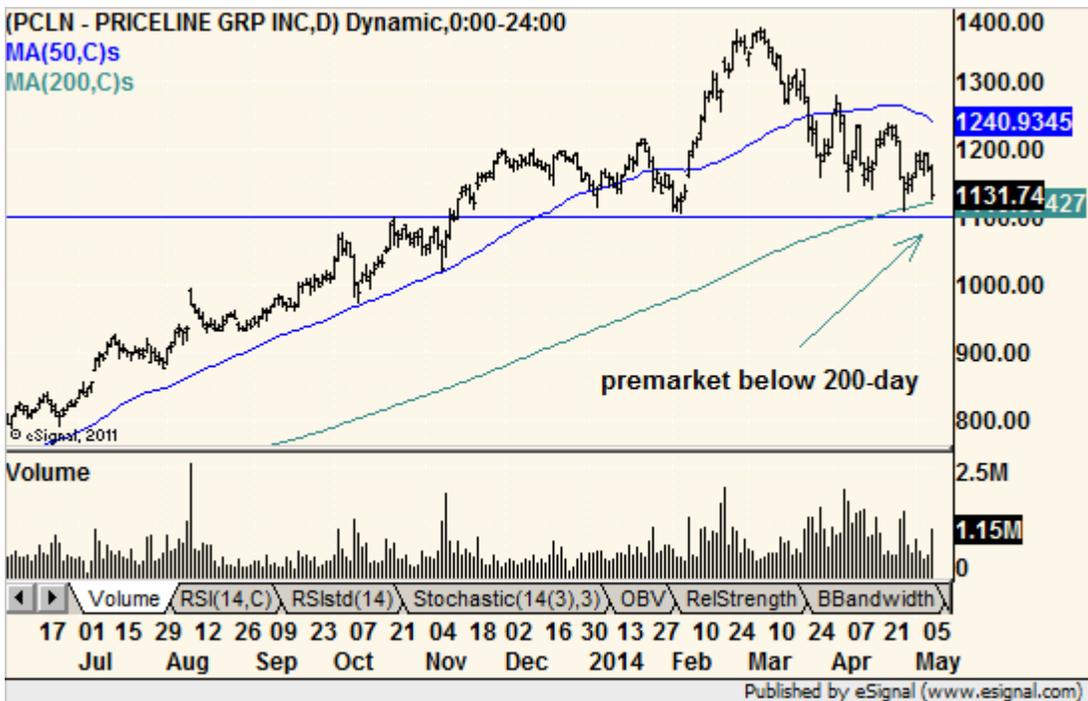

This is a list of potential opportunities, not a recommended portfolio. Underlined text is a change from previous report and if important it will be highlighted in yellow. We do not take "buy/sell on close" triggers or "at the open" triggers if the stock moves more than 4-5%. See <http://quicktakespro.com/radar.html> for all Radar Screen rules and terms.
